STATE CAPITOL VACATIONS

GIVE CAUSE FOR WORRY.

Some Get Two Weeks and Others Two Months, and What's the Reason?

Now that we are in the vacation season, attention is directed to what seems to be the unfair system of arranging vacations in the different departments in the state capital.

Some of the clerks get two weeks, others two months, and what's the reason for this? The answer is that the system is based on the length of service.

Those who have been in the service for a long time get two months, while those who have been in the service for a short time get two weeks.

The system is not fair, and it is time that it was changed. The state should have a uniform system of arranging vacations.

STATE WANTS $100,000 OF

HOTCHKISS GIFT TO YALE.

Question of Inheritance Tax on Two Million Dollar Estate.

Whether approximately $100,000 will be collected by the state of Connecticut in consequence of the present inheritance law or whether the $100,000 estate of the late Justus Hotchkiss of New Haven will go without the payment of an inheritance tax to Yale university under the will of Mr. Hotchkiss is a question which the state has decided as a matter of law, and it is probable that interesting points which will be raised in connection with the settlement of the estate will be determined by the supreme court.

The hearing on the proposed decree of Judge L. Gilson, the probate court for the district of New Haven for Wednesday, Aug. 2, at 10 a. m. A preliminary hearing was held at New Haven yesterday morning and it was arranged by counsel for the state and for the estate to have the hearing before Judge Gilson on the final decree of the probate court.

The question raised by Yale university is a very interesting one and a novel one under the 1915 inheritance law of this state, which has been amended by the act of 1915, which gave the state a right to a share of the inheritance tax on the estate of Justus Hotchkiss, the bulk of which is personal estate, affects it in that it is a question of whether the state is entitled to a share of the inheritance tax on the estate of Justus Hotchkiss, which would amount to approximately $100,000, on the ground that it receives state aid. Under the 1915 inheritance law, charitable institutions were exempt from the payment of an inheritance tax and on probate court held that Yale university was a charitable corporation or institution. Under the present inheritance law only corporations receiving state aid are entitled to an exemption from inheritance tax, and as Mr. Hotchkiss died after May 19, 1915, when the present inheritance law went into effect, the legacy to Yale university would be taxed in accordance with the general statutes of Connecticut exempt college buildings used for educational purposes from taxation, but it is understood that the state of Connecticut does not claim that such exemption does not constitute aid from the state and as such is contemplated in the 1915 act. While the attorney for the estate of Mr. Hotchkiss alleges that such an exemption is as a matter of fact from the state of Connecticut, and constitutes state aid as intended in the 1915 act. It is generally understood that at the present time Yale university does not receive any direct state aid, but at various times in the past the college received comparatively small amounts from the state, but no direct payment from an appropriation has been made to the college by the state since about 1883 or 1870. Yale university, or Yale college, owns considerable real estate in New Haven which is not used for educational or college purposes and on which a tax is paid, so that the college property is not entirely exempt from taxation. Whether or not the case is decided by the probate court for the district of New Haven, it will undoubtedly be appealed to the supreme court of the state, as the decision is a very important one.

At the continued hearing Aug. 25 at the probate court in New Haven the estate of Justus Hotchkiss was represented by General Heman and Judge Charles W. Cramer for the tax commissioner, and Yale university will be represented by the firm of Bristol & White of New Haven. The estate of Mr. Hotchkiss amounted to $1,347,412.50, the greater part of which was personal estate.
